Since Chancellor Barnhart had just recently been appointed, most of the meeting was spent bringing her up to speed on many of the issues we discuss in the document. The main topics discussed were dining, dorm culture, murals, and student-admin communication in general.

The Chancellor provided some input from her initial read of the document. She suggested that we pick a particular process in which admins felt that they had done a good job in communication, but where students disagreed and felt that they did not. Then, we can point out where in the process admins did not act in a way students wanted, and what we think they should have done differently.

We also briefly discussed an idea of having a dashboard for information sharing, which would be for students, faculty, and admins. Essentially, the dashboard would be personalized for the user. Some questions still to be answered: Where will the information come from? What kind of information would people want to see? What format should it be in?
